Madison community invited to share their stories with PBS Wisconsin for upcoming history documentary

PBS Wisconsin will host six Madison community story sharing sessions for the latest installment in the Wisconsin Hometown Stories series, scheduled to air in 2027.

At each community story sharing session, the documentary's producers and other station representatives will host a conversation with attendees to learn more about the people and places that tell Madison's unique history. These sessions will help identify critical stories and inform the documentary's development.

Two community story sharing sessions will be held at each event. Session one will be held from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Session two will be held from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. They will be held on the following dates:

Tuesday, April 1, in the community room at the Madison College Goodman South Campus, 2429 Perry St., Madison.

Thursday, April 3, in the first floor classroom at the Bayview Community Center, 103 La Mariposa Ln., Madison. Free childcare will be available for this session.

Monday, April 7, in the multipurpose room at the Vera Court Neighborhood Center, 614 Vera Ct., Madison.

Individuals do not need to attend more than one session.

No RSVP is required. Seating is limited. For questions or to request accommodations, please call 608-265-5037.

"PBS Wisconsin is proud to focus on the rich history of Madison in the next chapter of our Wisconsin Hometown Stories series," said Jon Miskowski, PBS Wisconsin Director of Television. "The series is built upon a deep collaboration with a community to preserve and share its story. The process begins with listening to people share their stories and their sense of what defines their hometown. These story sharing sessions are a great opportunity for the people of Madison to become a part of the documentary's development."

You can also share your story with PBS Wisconsin on this website form:
